

Gold edges toward record high as Middle East war drives haven bids

Gold rose toward a record high as an escalating conflict between Israel and Iran drove investors toward haven assets. The two countries hit each other with barrages of missile and drones over the weekend, with the hostilities pushing up energy prices on the threat to energy infrastructure and transport in the region. The sudden upsurge of geopolitical risk has added more impetus to a rally that's primarily been driven by the threat to global economic growth from President Donald Trump's aggressive tariff agenda. Gold has rallied more than 30% in 2025, with central banks seeking to diversify away from the dollar being another significant driver.

Oil prices above $75/bbl as Israel-Iran conflict intensifies

Crude oil prices edged higher early Monday as tensions escalated between Israel and Iran, with both countries targeting each other's key energy infrastructure. Over the weekend, Israel launched airstrikes on several oil and gas fields in Iran, including South Pars, one of the world's largest natural gas reserves. Despite the intensity of the attacks, reports indicated that there has been no immediate disruption to energy supplies.

Copper Rebounds as SHFE Stocks Fall 5.5% And US-China Trade Tensions Ease

Copper prices edged up due to drop in SHFE inventories and tentative signs of easing U.S.-China trade tensions. However, gains were capped amid heightened geopolitical uncertainty following Israel's pre-emptive strike on Iran, which triggered retaliatory drone attacks and spurred global risk aversion. Sentiment was further dampened by U.S. President Donald Trump's renewed threats of unilateral tariffs, adding to concerns about a slowdown in global trade and industrial demand. On the fundamental side, concerns persist over weakening demand from China. Domestic smelters are increasingly turning to exports to manage oversupply, reflecting sluggish local consumption.

Rupee advances as Middle East tensions, and rallying Oil prices batter Indian Rupee

The Indian Rupee (INR) is down over 0.6% to near 86.25 against the US Dollar (USD) during the European trading session on Friday. The USD/INR pair surges as the Indian Rupee underperforms due to multiple headwinds, including soft India's Consumer Price Index (CPI) data for May, a stellar upside move in the Oil price and dismal market sentiment amid tensions in the Middle East, and selling by Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) in the Indian equity market. Another reason behind the sharp upside move in the pair is the USD's strong recovery, driven by an increase in demand for safe-haven assets.
